Overview

Situated in Rasuwa district of Nepal, Gosaikunda lies in the north of Kathmandu between Helambu, Langtang Valley and Langtang National Park. Gosaikunda is the name for a sacred holy lake where it is believed that Lord Shiva took a bath in this lake for acquiring purity of soul while meditating in the Himalayas of Nepal and Tibet. So, every year in the festival of Janai Purnima, devotees walk all the way up to the lake, offer their prayers and take a dip in the lake to purify their soul. Gosaikunda is the nearest trek from Kathmandu valley, yet it is the less taken trail than Annapurna Base Camp and Everest Base Camp.

The Gosaikunda trek has an extremely diverse landscapes; including rice terraces, gigantic rhododendron and pine forests at the lower lands and rock and shrub wilderness with the fascinating backdrop of snow capped peaks in the higher lands. You will also have the opportunity to witness the beauty of the Gosaikunda Lake. The trek begins from Dhunche, which is a full day drive from Kathmandu. Cross the Laurebina pass (4,600 meters), where the mountains rise soaring towards the sky, and drop into the lush Helambu region and the trek ends at Sundarijal from which Kathmandu is only an hour drive.

The trekking trail is also home to the red panda, a shy and charismatic endangered mammal species called Habre in Nepali. Tourists, both foreign and domestic, visit the area around the year but September to November and March to May are the main trekking seasons in this region and ideal for the magnificent views all around the trek.
