Overview

It is a privilege to be able to trek in the Upper Mustang region. You will get to experience a way of life of the local people living in the region for hundreds of years and are completely different than other people of Nepal. The main highlight of the trek to Upper Mustang has to be the unique cultural heritage of the people living in the region. In many ways, trek to Upper Mustang is similar to trekking in Tibet as the landscapes are similar and geographically Upper Mustang is a part of the Tibetan plateau.

Being in the Himalayan rain shadow, Upper Mustang is one of the regions in Nepal suitable for trekking even during the monsoons. During the monsoon season, the region only experiences occasional rainfall. The highest point in this trek is only 3800 m so it is not particularly difficult but the conditions at times can be challenging. The Mustang region is always windy and dusty throughout the year. Trek to Upper Mustang in the winter season must be avoided due to the harsh weather conditions.

Despite the weather conditions, it is definitely worth the time due to the unique desert-like landscapes, hidden ancient caves and shamanic tales from the region which entices you to explore more of the region. Explore the rock paintings, monasteries and gumbas to learn about the culture of the people living in Upper Mustang. Panoramic views of Nilgiri, Annapurna, Dhaulagiri and other mountain peaks are appealing to the eye.

As you walk through the trails, you will walk back to the history of the place catching a glimpse of Tibetan influence on everyday activities and culture of the locals there. Breathe the spirituality of the place by chanting the ritual prayers of the people and monks there. The people there celebrate a unique festival called Tiji. Tiji is an annual three-day festival celebrated in Lo Manthang, the capital of Upper Mustang every year in the myth of a son who had to save the Mustang kingdom from destruction. As the Tiji is a lunar festival every year the dates are different but usually it is celebrated in the end of May and starting of June. Lo Manthang can be reached in four days from Kagbeni and it is best if you spend an extra day here to soak in the sights and sounds of the unique settlement there.
